Anne worked in hospitals in Texas and North Carolina prior to joining the leadership team of the Centre Hospitalier de Saumur in France in 1994, where she also worked with hospitals in Geneva, Switzerland and Glasgow, Scotland. Upon her return to the United States in 1997 she joined the staff of the Southeast Division of HCA and in 1999 became the Executive Director of Providence Hospital, Northeast, in Columbia, South Carolina.

In 2004, Anne left the comfort of her professional environment and journeyed to New Delhi, India, to lead a team of 3,000 employees to become the First Hospital in India to earn Joint Commission International accreditation. It took the team 10 months from her arrival to accomplishment! This accreditation is considered globally to be the gold standard of quality.

In 2006 she assumed became president of United Family Healthcare, a US-owned hospital company based in Beijing with facilities in Beijing, Shanghai, Tianjin, Guangzhou, and Wu Xi. In late 2007, just as caution was becoming the operating mode of capital markets, Anne and her team at United Family Healthcare raised USD 100 Million for expansion. They later went onto to confirm her expertise in leading organizations through Joint Commission accreditation: in June and early July 2008, while the healthcare system was gearing up to provide support to several of the world's Olympic Committees, the team demonstrated its prowess in earning accreditation in both Beijing and Shanghai, confirming the expertise seen in India.

In 2009 Anne returned to the United States to represent Fortis Healthcare in North America. "It has allowed me to be nearer to a growing family and stay engaged in global healthcare. Dedicating my time and talent to the Leadership Corp and HIS Group extends the work I began abroad and addresses the need for talent and partnerships that I witnessed first hand."
